

Charlotte Villiers is Professor of Company Law at the University of Bristol. She has previously worked at the Universities of Sheffield and Glasgow and as a visiting professor at the University of Oviedo. She is also a qualified solicitor. Her expertise and teaching and research interests include company law, corporate governance and labour law. She is currently working on issues in company law and sustainable business, executive pay, and gender and corporate governance.